I feel the school should ring parents and ask how there student is doing, or do they need support. this has not been the case since my son has been at home since march. Sending sn Emsil is not the same. This is a specialist school, but my son hss been forgotten. My daughters school is mainstream and she receives phones almost every week.

Email, phone or text is fine

I prefer email, sms, WhatsApp or phone call is fine too

Q4 - Please tell us how we could improve our communication of our response to the evolving Covid-19 situation.

Please tell us how we could improve our communication of our response to the evolving Covid-19 situation.

Follow up with email or letter

Support is awful

I think the school has done an amazing job in keeping the parents informed considering the situation the world found itself in.

You done well

Checking up on your students via phone call, its been almost 3 months and I just received 4 emails from his teacher

Weekly update

There have been some Government announcements regarding the return to school, so it would be good when there are these announcements if the school got in touch to say whether there were any changes to the situation at Drumbeat

No improvement needed. Very informative.

Inform with more frequency the steps you are taking

Because thd school did a risk assessment without consulting the parents to keep my son out of school, had the school put strategies in place, being a specialist Asd school this is possible, my son would have had all the support he requires, from school,rather then being left and made to stay at home.

One day a week but hoping for more as space becomes available and hopefully back on the brockley site as it's the last term. Closure and transition is so important.

If he wants to come in then yes

Q6 - When school gradually start to reopen, will you feel comfortable coming into school/sending your child into school?

At present we are uncomfortable with the easing of lock down. Although keeping our son home has its challenges but his health comes first.

If I feel it's safe for him it depends on the circumstances

How the situation will improve.

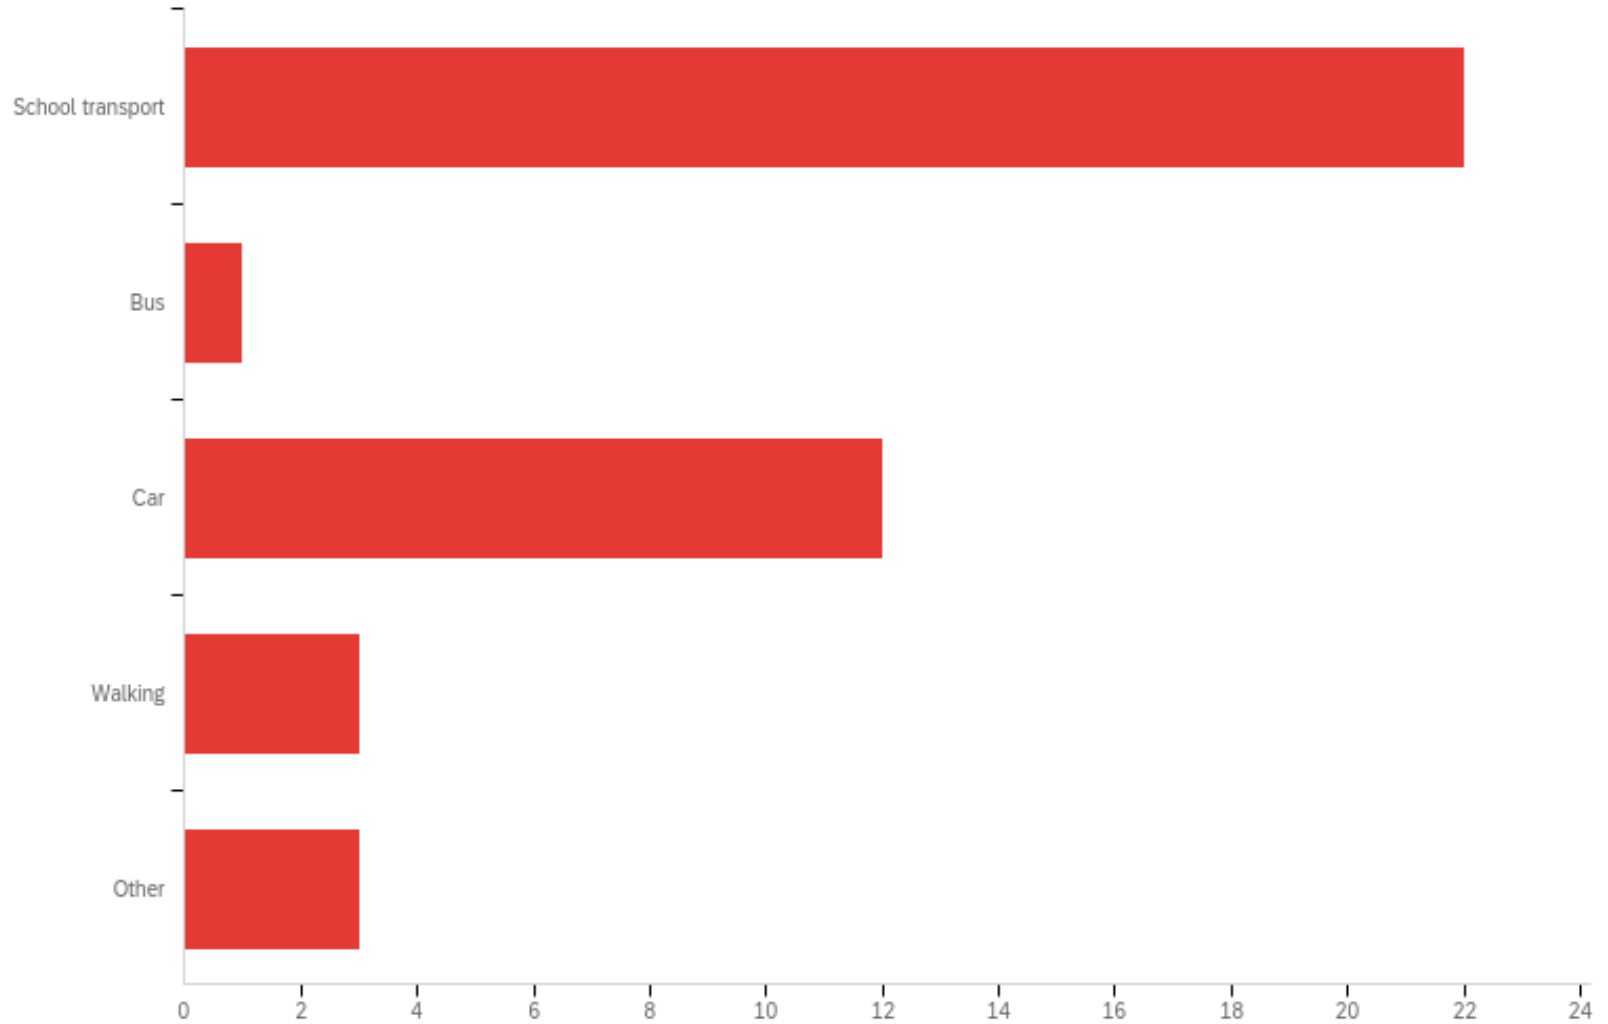

Because my son has underlying respiratory medical conditions that could easily b compromised by Covid19 and social distances can be compromised by people's behaviour which in turn can easily compromised my son condition. It is also difficult for a my son with ASD and ADHD to understand, follow and practice social distancing he learns through moving around a lot and touching things and people and leaning on people he as know wareness or understand social rules

When does the school intend in allowing my son who is a non violent autistic child back to school? When do they feel they should support an extremely vulnerable child? Who you have stop from attending school depends on the current death and infection rates and the measures the school say it is taking to ensure social distancing child is shielding

Q14 - Do you have any suggestions on how to make the transition back to school as comfortable as possible for the children?

Do you have any suggestions on how to make the transition back to school as comfortable as possible for the children?

Children need more support and prompting to remind them washing hands, and use antibacterial gel where it is not possible to wash hands.

Keep everything as normal/as was previously as possible. Little reference to covid 19 just indicating any new measures/systems eg washing hands timetable that have been put in place.

We will need lots of support as they are out of routine

Perhaps start with a few days first.

Perhaps start with half days.

My son has been ready to go back to school from easter. He needs school routine back, this is normal for him.

If you needed to reduce class size to help with social distancing we would understand if our child was asked to return on a part time basis initially

For us I'd like this to happen as soon as is possible as it's my child's last term at Drumbeat. There is a panic in her that she will never get to go back!

Q14 - Do you have any suggestions on how to make the transition back to school as comfortable as possible for the children?

Do you have any suggestions on how to make the transition back to school as comfortable as possible for the children?

I think is very important to keep the same peers in the class room, to make a familiar environment to the children, I know the teachers wont be the same in September.

No he normal attends Brockley but because the site is closed he is going to downham at the moment

Consistent staffing, small groups,fun activitied

Just keep what you are doing as there is a need for special needs children
